What we do

We are here to use people's experience of healthcare to make services better.

We do this by supporting people with a learning disability, carers and staff to work together.

We place equal value on lived experience and professional experience – this is called co-production.

We do this in a big way by improving services, for example a project about medication labels or in ways that support a person such as co-designing a care plan.

What is important to us

- we are always learning

- we work with you and not do for you, so that we all learn from each other

- we are co-working

- we take time to understand the problem and co-design solutions
